Program

In this dynamic workshop, presenter Trevor Aleo will share how attendees can infuse their ELA courses with powerful multimodal literacies learning. Instead of regarding multimodality as a separate topic or fun addition to your core curriculum, this session will explore how multimodal literacies teaching can be woven into every unit in ways that build knowledge, foster aesthetic sensibilities, and engage learners. In addition to receiving a variety of resources, tools, and strategies, participants will explore a repertoire of practices they can use themselves and/or alongside students in transformative ways. Whether you're merely multimodally curious or a longtime lover of multimodal literacies, this workshop is an invitation to both reframe and reconnect with the beauty of the humanities.

Presenters

Trevor Aleo

Trevor is currently an educational consultant and member of the English faculty at Greenwich Country Day School in Fairfield, Connecticut. He is an experienced professional learning facilitator who's conducted workshops at public, private, and international schools in North America and worldwide. Trevor recently co-authored the best-selling book "Learning that Transfers: Designing Curriculum for a Changing World" and has published articles on critical, multimodal, and literary literacies in various edited volumes and academic journals, including English Journal and the National Council of Teachers of English's Critical Media Literacy Special Issue.

In addition to his K-12 teaching experience, Trevor is pursuing a Doctorate of Education in Learning Design and Leadership from the University of Illinois Urbana Champaign. He's passionate about leveraging the latest research to design meaningful professional learning experiences for fellow teachers.

Trevor recently participated in a podcast episode on the ARPDC Podcast, Change Maker Conversations in English: Literacy Across the Curriculum Series.

Registration Notes

While this session will be recorded and available for 30 days following the session, live participation provides an excellent opportunity to visit Trevor in a Q and A model and interact with the other participants online, sharing ideas and gaining additional insights.

In short - best to be there - on the call, but the learning will be valuable for your ELAL - Social Studies - Humanities teams on a recorded nature as well.
