Program

Join Dr Phil McRae (philmcrae.com) as he shares a growing body of research indicating that today's hyper-connected youth are growing up to be less rebellious and more tolerant, but less happy and with more anxiety and depression. Phil will explore with participants the scope of physical, mental and social consequences of emerging technologies on health and learning. He will also discuss the most recent 2018 findings of the Growing Up Digital (GUD) Alberta research study between the Alberta Teachers' Association, Harvard Medical School, Boston Children's Hospital & the University of Alberta.

Presenters

Dr. Phil McRae

Dr. Philip McRae is Executive Staff Officer and Associate Coordinator, Government-Research with the Alberta Teachers' Association and Adjunct Professor within the Faculty of Education at the University of Alberta where he earned his Ph.D. Phil is the past winner of the Alberta Excellence in Teaching Finalist Award, the University of Alberta's Queen Elizabeth II Doctoral Scholar Award, Minister of Education's Innovation Award, and the ATA Provincial Educational Research Award. Dr. McRae coordinates the research activities for the profession of teaching in the province of Alberta, Canada; facilitates the strategic planning for the Association; and liaises with local, national and international research communities on education issues. McRae has worked in many secondary and post-secondary educational contexts while living and teaching in the Middle East (United Arab Emirates), Asia (Japan), Europe (Spain), and in Alberta, Canada with the Lethbridge Public School District and at Red Crow College with the Kainai First Nation. The Indigenous Blackfoot people honoured him with the name Áípapomm, which means lightning.
